NEWS from the CPSC

Televisions, chests, armoires, and appliances are found in almost every room in your home. However, these items can tip over, and crush children causing injury or death. The Consumer Product Safety Commission reports that in the last two years there have been approximately 40 reports of television or furniture related tip-over deaths.

These deaths and injuries frequently occur when children climb onto, fall against or pull themselves up on television stands, shelves, bookcases, dressers, desks, chests and stove oven doors. Televisions placed on top of furniture can tip over and cause a child to suffer traumatic and sometimes fatal injuries.

To help prevent tip-over hazards, the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission recommends the following safety tips:

- Verify that your furniture is stable on its own.
- For added security, anchor all entertainment units, television stands, bookcases, shelving and bureaus to the wall of floor using appropriate hardware, such as brackets, screws, or toggles.
- Place televisions on sturdy furniture appropriate for the size of the television or on a low-rise base.
- Push the television as far back as possible from the front of its stand.
- Place electrical cords out of a child's reach, and teach children not to play with the cords.
- Remove items, such as toys and remote controls, from the top of the television and furniture that may tempt kids to climb.

Tip-over related deaths continue to be a problem, but these tragedies can be prevented by taking the above precautions.
